

Summary

A device for protecting against unauthorized use of software, whereby a first wireless device exchanges data directly or indirectly with a process running the 5 software on a computing system and the process runs incorrectly or in an error condition if the exchanged data contain errors.